

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

The leading society event of last evening was the marriage of Miss Edith Talmage Donnan, daughter of Mrs. Allan Edith Donnan, and Angus Hedges Mann, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Hedges of Utica, N. Y. A small but distinguished gathering of relatives and friends, which included the Governor of Virginia and Mrs. William Hedges Mann, uncle and aunt of the bride, witnessed the ceremony at 8:30 o'clock in the Donnan home, 512 Floyd Avenue. Rt. Rev. Dr. J. O'Connell, Bishop of Richmond, officiated. An orchestra played the wedding music and for the reception followed. An improvised altar of cat-tail reeds with panels of white chrysanthemums and pink carnations was arranged at one end of the drawing-room and a chancel effect was formed with Southern smilax and white blossoms. Many lighted candles and bunches of white chrysanthemums in pedestal vases were used everywhere, and the other rooms were hung with Southern smilax and wall pockets of white blossoms. A plaque of lilies of the valley and pink roses decorated the table in the dining-room, and yellow chrysanthemums and bay trees were used in the hall.

The bride descended the staircase with her brother, Allan Eddie Donnan, who gave her away. Her wedding gown was an exquisitely fashioned of softest white charmeuse, and made with a court train that fell from the shoulders. The bodice was embroidered in pearls and an overture of point lace, which had adorned the bridal gown of her mother, draped the skirt and neatly covered the long train. Her veil of illusion fell from the Grecian head in rose points, caught with orange blossoms. She carried a presentation bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley. Clarence Williams, of New York, was Mr. Clark's best man; little Virginia Donnan, who was flower girl, wore a quaint frock of lace, copied from an old print. The cash was of pale pink satin ribbon, and she carried a "grandmother" bouquet of pink buds and lilies of the valley, elegantly tied with a thin pink ribbon and streamers. The maid of honor, Miss Nealie Gere of Syracuse, N. Y., was a French frock of white satin, made with tufts of white silk tulle embroidered in pink heads and caught at intervals with pink rose-buds. Her bouquet was a shower of pink roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Doris Jones, of Richmond, and Doris Bancam, of New York City, were bridesmaids. Their dresses were of white silk satin, with pleated tunics of white silk tulle embroidered in rose-colored heads, and they carried bouquets similar to that of the maid of honor.

Additional guests were invited for the reception following the ceremony and Mr. and Mrs. Clark left later in the evening for a motor tour of Massachusetts. They will make their home in Utica, N. Y. Mrs. Donnan was gowned in cream-colored charmeuse, with a border of silver lace, finished with jet and touches of blue. Mrs. Anna E. Hedges Mann, of Utica, wore black lace over white satin. The bride is a lovely girl and belongs to one of the best known families in the South, having made her debut in Richmond two winters ago at a brilliant ball given in the Executive Mansion. The wedding last evening is one of the most important society events of the late fall season.

Among the out-of-town guests here for the marriage were Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Clark, Warren Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Clarke, Edward Baile, Charles Bass, Miss Louise Doolittle, all of Utica, N. Y.; Edmund Wickson, of Utica, N. Y.; Mrs. D. D. Mangum, Mrs. Warren Smith, of New York City; Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Warner, of Roswell, Ga.; Patrick Hamilton, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Hamilton, Willie Donnan, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Donnan Hamilton; Mr. and Mrs. McEvoy, all of Petersburg and others.
